Every summer thousands of children head to camps across Russia from the shores of Lake Baikal to the beaches of the Black Sea. Each camp has its own philosophy, but all provide children a place to relax while having fun in an outdoor setting. In many ways, these camps resemble those in the United States and Canada, as they are usually located in a rural setting. They are often located near a lake or river away from the nearest town, and typically have a large dining hall, crafts, sports buildings and dormitories. Children usually come for sessions lasting 14 to 21 days and participate in activities such as swimming, boating, canoeing, theatre, land sports, arts, crafts, dance, and performing arts.

- Travel Until September 1st: Explore the sights and sounds of Russia after camp.
- Emergency Assistance Hotline: Available 24 hours whilst you are in Russia.

BEING A CAMP COUNSELOR

As a Camp Counselor, you will be with campers 24 hours a day. You are a leader, role model, friend, instructor, big brother or sister, cheerleader and hero to campers ages 7 – 17. Your primary responsibility is overall supervision and to ensure the campers well-being and safety. Camp Counselors are there to make the children's camp experience more fun and rewarding. You will assist in ensuring the campers eat meals, attend and participate in day and evening activities, clean cabins, and get to sleep at night.

YOUR ROLE

Russian camps place the most emphasis on the children having fun and getting exercise—it is your primary role to facilitate this. Your exact position and duties at camp will depend largely upon the level of your Russian speaking ability. It is NOT essential that you speak Russian to participate on the program; however if you are able to speak some of the language, you will find that the daily opportunities for integrating into camp life are greater.

- Your duties as a Camp Counselor if you speak some Russian or are fluent: your role may include the planning and leading of day-to-day activities including sports, arts and water based activities.
- Your duties as a Camp Counselor if you have little Russian language abilities: your role will be more of an assisting role. You might help with specific sports or activities, depending on your own level of experience and expertise. You will not supervise or lead activities if you do not have the appropriate language expertise.

There are some camps which offer language programs to their campers; you may be asked to help with lessons and with encouraging the children to practice their English language conversational abilities.

Whatever your role may be at camp, the most important thing to remember is to encourage the campers to make the most of each day and to have fun!

ACCOMMODATION

Each camp is different; however, most counselors will live in a cabin, platform tent or dormitory style accommodation with a co-counselor and 8 to 10 campers. Sometimes cabins have their own bathroom, but it is also common for several cabins to share a large centralized bath and shower facility.

Accommodation is separated by gender and usually by age, so that similar age groups are together.

FOOD

Be prepared for some of the most delicious food you'll ever taste, but don't expect it to taste like what you eat at home. The Russian camp diet is varied and plentiful; however, Russian camps have little experience of vegetarian or other special diets. If you follow this choice of eating be prepared for repetitive meals.

Staff and campers eat together, often in a dining hall or other allocated room. At meal times, food is generally served in one of two ways:

1. Family style – with platters of meat, fish, vegetables and bread brought to the table
2. Canteen style – where everyone helps themselves from a serving hatch/buffet line.

Camps always provide 3 meals a day for their staff and campers, and snacks are available between meals.
